

48 Hours in Lisbon

A weekend guide for people who like getting lost

Pack light, walk slow, eat everything.

What's Ahead

Day One — The Old Hills

Day Two — Water & Light

The Essentials

The old hills, on foot

Lisbon's oldest quarter doesn't reward plans; it rewards wrong turns. Day one is one long walk through Alfama and Graça — churches, tiled facades, laundry lines, and seven chances to stop and look at the river.

the detour is the destination

Morning — Alfama before the crowds

Start at Miradouro de Santa Luzia by 8:30, then drop downhill through Alfama — downhill is the trick; you'll cover twice the ground. Coffee happens standing up, at whichever pastelaria has locals in it.

Worth noting:

Ride Tram 28 before 9am or not at all — after that it's a queue on rails. The E12 loop gets you the same hills with half the wait.

Afternoon — Graça and the castle ridge

Lunch near the Feira da Ladra flea market (Tuesdays and Saturdays), then follow the ridge to Miradouro da Graça for the classic castle-and-river view. Save São Jorge itself for golden hour.

Book before you fly

- ☒ Dinner at a fado house (the small rooms sell out first)
- ☐ Timed ticket for São Jorge castle
- ☐ Day-two train seats to Belém (or plan to tap on with a Viva card)

The route, hour by hour

When	Where	Why
08:30	Miradouro de Santa Luzia	Tiles, bougainvillea, the whole river — before the tour groups
10:00	Alfama lanes, downhill	The wrong-turn hour; follow the laundry lines
13:00	Graça, long lunch	Grilled fish where the menu is handwritten
17:30	São Jorge castle	Golden hour over the rooftops
20:30	Fado house, Alfama	Book the small room; order the house wine

11km

Walked, mostly downhill if you follow the route

7

Miradouros — viewpoints — on day one alone

€0

Cost of every view on this page

Water & light — the Belém run

1

Belém by 9

Monastery first, pastéis de Belém second — eat them warm, standing, with cinnamon.

2

MAAT and the riverfront

Walk the water east past the museum's curve; this is the flattest, brightest hour of the weekend.

3

Sunset at Santa Catarina

Back in town, join the crowd on the miradouro steps. Bring a pastry. You've earned two.

The last evening

18:00

Miradouro de Santa Catarina — sunset with half the city.

19:30

Bairro Alto while it's still quiet; dinner at a tasca, no reservation.

22:00

One last ginjinha, standing at the counter, like you live there.

You'll plan ten things and remember the wrong turn.