

FREE KIT

Your AI workflow, finally calm.

The three-pass system I use to draft, design, and ship content with AI — without the twelve open tabs.

Inside: the 3-pass system · copy-paste prompts · a week that actually ships

Three passes, not thirty tabs

Most AI workflows die from tool-hopping. This one uses a single rule: every piece of content gets exactly three passes — divergence, decision, polish.

WHY IT WORKS

Each pass has one job and one output. You never ask AI to "make it good" — you ask it to diverge, then you decide, then it polishes. The decision pass stays human. That's the whole trick.

PASS 1 PROMPT — STEAL THIS

Give me 10 angles on [topic] for [audience]. For each: the hook in one line, the emotional payoff in one line. No intros, no hedging. Rank them by how surprising the hook is.

- [x] Save the three pass prompts as text shortcuts
- [] Pick one project to run the system on this week
- [] Time yourself — compare against your usual draft (you'll want the receipt)

[the numbers]

What it saves

Four weeks of tracking my own content production, before and after the system.

TASK	BEFORE	WITH THE SYSTEM
First draft of a carousel	2.5 hours	40 minutes
Reel script + hook options	1.5 hours	25 minutes
Newsletter issue	3 hours	1 hour

6h

SAVED PER WEEK, MEASURED

3

PASSES PER PIECE, NEVER MORE

15min

ONE-TIME SETUP

CAROUSEL

-73%

REEL

-72%

NEWSLETTER

-67%

FIG. 1 — LIME = TIME WITH THE SYSTEM, OUTLINE = BEFORE

[the week]

A week that ships

PASS 01 — DIVERGE

Monday: generate wide

Run the angle prompt on every idea in the backlog. Don't judge anything yet.

PASS 02 — DECIDE

Tuesday: choose like an editor

Pick the three strongest angles yourself. AI proposes; you dispose.

PASS 03 — POLISH

Wednesday–Thursday: finish

One polish pass per piece against your voice notes, then schedule everything.

FRIDAY

Review what shipped; feed the best performer back into Monday's backlog.

WEEKEND

Nothing. The system worked; go outside.

TEN ANGLES IN, ONE WORTH SHIPPING

[closing]

Steal the system this week,
then make it yours.

Made with my pdf-design-skill for Claude – follow @janustiu for the next kit.